Vision Statement

We are agents of positive change striving for continuous improvements in our agency’s management and program operations, as well as within the Office of Inspector General.

Statement of Principles

We will:

Work with the Commission and the Congress to improve program management.

Maximize the positive impact and ensure the independence and objectivity of our audits, investigations, and other reviews.

Use our investigations and other reviews to increase government integrity and recommend improved systems to prevent fraud, waste, and abuse.

Be innovative, question existing procedures, and suggest improvements.

Build relationships with program managers based on a shared commitment to improving program operations and effectiveness.

Strive to continually improve the quality and usefulness of our products.

Work together to address government-wide issues.

SUBJECT: Results of the OIG Survey on the Transition to Mandatory Fulltime Telework

I am pleased to present the results of the OIG survey on the management of the agency’s transition to mandatory fulltime telework (MFT). The survey provides good news for agency management, as overall, staff feels that the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) management effectively accomplished the transition to MFT last March. Staff generally had positive views on communications from management regarding the transition and information concerning COVID-19.

We also asked about the quality of Information Technology Help Desk support and once again staff had generally positive views. Many staff had to use teleconferencing tools and indicated that two tools, Microsoft Teams and Zoom, are the easiest to use and provide the best audio and video quality.

Finally, we asked employees and supervisors how they feel about productivity during MFT and nearly everyone agreed that they were either as productive or more productive. Supervisors gained experience in managing teleworkers during MFT. As a result of events during the last few months, almost everyone indicated an interest in increased telework options going forward.

We plan to follow-up this survey with a survey on employee views related to their return to their primary work location.

I want to thank CPSC staff for participating in this survey and look forward to learning what concerns they have as CPSC plans its return to normal operations.
Background

On Monday, March 16, 2020, staff at the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) entered an unprecedented work environment due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Over the prior weekend, the Office of Management and Budget issued Memorandum 20-15 ordering all federal agencies to allow maximum telework flexibilities for all telework eligible employees and to offer this option to other employees to the extent their work can be telework enabled. During the summer of 2020, it became clear that mandatory fulltime telework would continue for the foreseeable future. Therefore, the Office of Inspector General (OIG) decided it was appropriate to survey CPSC staff about concerns and positive experiences regarding:

- amount and types of communication from management
- the information technology (IT) Help Desk
- videoconferencing options
- productivity and supervision during mandatory fulltime telework
- future of telework

This survey was sent to 539 unique email addresses and 318 people responded during the survey window of September 17-25, 2020. We asked all respondents to tell us where they work.

Additionally, we asked respondents whether they were supervisors in order to direct them to a subset of questions regarding supervisory experiences and views during mandatory fulltime telework; 51 individuals stated that they were supervisors. These 51 supervisors represent 56 percent of employees identified by the CPSC as supervisors at the time of the survey.

Results in Brief

Overall, employees have a positive view of mandatory fulltime telework and the agency’s management of the transition. As of the time of the survey, they report feeling that they are getting the right amount of information from CPSC management. They express positive views on the quality and timeliness of the IT Help Desk’s support. Almost everyone has become experienced in using videoconferencing platforms to collaborate between and within offices. Most employees feel that they are either as productive, or more productive, since moving to mandatory fulltime telework and supervisors agree. There has been a shift in attitudes in favor of the CPSC providing more telework opportunities in the future. This appears to have been driven by employees and supervisors gaining experience with telework and seeing few, if any, drawbacks.

Communication from Agency Management

Employees feel that they are receiving the right amount of information from the Acting Chairman, the Executive Director, and the Office of Human Resource Management (EXRM).

Experiences with the IT Help Desk

Employees are satisfied with the timeliness and quality of the assistance they have received from the IT Help Desk.

Have you contacted the IT Help Desk for assistance while on mandatory fulltime telework? If so, was the IT Help Desk able to provide you the assistance you needed?

Since moving to mandatory fulltime telework, 267 employees have requested assistance from the IT Help Desk and of those 84 percent said the IT Help Desk was able to resolve their problem.

The top five reasons for contacting the IT Help Desk were:

- Network connectivity
- Accessibility/login issues
- Application/software issues
- Conversion to Windows 10
- Hardware/equipment issues
Videoconferencing

Videoconferencing is a key tool for remote collaboration. Surprisingly, some employees responded that they had not used any of the tools available to CPSC employees for collaborative work.

Productivity and Supervision

Overall, about 90 percent of all respondents reported that they were as much, or more productive, since switching to fulltime telework.

*For all employees: How do you feel your productivity level has been affected since going to mandatory fulltime telework?

272 Responses
Of the 26 respondents who reported being less productive, 13 of them worked either in the lab, or in the field.

For supervisors: Overall, how productive do you think your staff is while on mandatory fulltime telework as compared to working in the office?

![Pie chart showing productivity levels]

The staff self-assessment about productivity is supported by supervisors, most of whom reported that their staff is as productive or more productive since the move to mandatory fulltime telework. None of the supervisors believed that their staff were less productive.

Compared to before fulltime mandatory telework, how much time do you spend on supervisory tasks?

Over 74 percent of supervisors who responded stated that their time spent on supervisory tasks had not changed since moving to mandatory fulltime telework.
Opinions about Telework

This experience has given staff and supervisors much more comfort with telework.

Has your experience during mandatory fulltime telework changed your opinion about telework?

273 Responses

If yes, what is your opinion now?

114 Responses

Become more favorable 106

Become less favorable 8

The general staff responses indicated that 93 percent had become more favorable towards telework and seven percent had become less favorable. Of the 14 supervisors who reported that their opinion on telework has changed, all agreed it has become more favorable.
Telework Positives and Challenges

Employees reported more than twice as many positives versus challenges as a result of mandatory fulltime telework.

Please tell us what you found to be the most positive parts of mandatory fulltime telework:

The top five positive comments are:

- no commute (140 respondents)
- more productivity (65 respondents)
- more flexibility when scheduling work and personal responsibilities (52 respondents)
- fewer distractions (56 respondents)
- saving money (56 respondents)

Please tell us what you found to be the most challenging parts of mandatory fulltime telework:

The top five challenges identified are:

- lack of face-to-face interaction/socialization (57 respondents)
- IT connectivity issues (42 respondents)
- lack of equipment or access to equipment (25 respondents)
- communicating with coworkers or subordinates (16 respondents)
- family challenges (i.e. children at home distance learning) (12 respondents)

Future Telework

As a result of this experience with mandatory fulltime telework, more staff are interested in increased telework options. For this analysis, we only included staff assigned to headquarters or the lab.

Telework status per pay period prior to mandatory fulltime telework for employees who regularly teleworked was:

Prior to mandatory fulltime telework most employees who teleworked did so one day per week or two days per pay period.

Based on your experience with mandatory fulltime telework, how many days in the office per pay period would be optimal for you to complete your mission responsibilities?

On average both supervisors and staff feel that the optimal number of days in the office per pay period is three or fewer.
Scope, Objective and Methodology

This survey was undertaken to understand CPSC employee’s responses to the challenges and opportunities presented by the unprecedented move to mandatory fulltime telework beginning on March 16, 2020. We analyzed results as a whole and, as appropriate to the question, by work location and supervisory status.

This survey was a special project undertaken to address concerns about mandatory fulltime telework. Special projects are narrowly scoped projects carried out to answer specific questions. They are not necessarily listed in the OIG Annual Work Plan and are not performed in accordance with General Accepted Government Auditing Standards.

We conducted this survey from September 17-25, 2020, using Qualtrics survey software. This survey was sent to 539 unique email addresses and received 318 responses. The questions were developed by OIG staff. Questions were modified and assessed against best practices as described in professional survey literature. The survey was tested by OIG staff before it was distributed to agency employees. All survey respondents remain anonymous.

This project was an addition to the Fiscal Year 2020 OIG Annual Plan.
